“ I'll miss calling uncle George and hearing him say, "hey have you been out to the cemetary lately", or "when do you think we can go to communal confession". Well I will miss taking him to the cemetary, confession, out to eat, and to the show. I'll miss all the war stories. Uncle George was a gunner on a ship during the war and when given the command he would fire. He always said he never knew what he was shooting at and didn't think he killed anybody. Uncle George kept up with all the news and politics; I'll miss all our conversations. Love you Uncle George XXOO.

“ We all have great memories of Uncle George. Sorry I cannot be there in person with the rest of the family as you celebrate his life. He loved the extended family and the family loved him. We always enjoyed seeing and talking to him at family celebrations. Thank God he lived a healthy life and did not suffer long at the end. He recently got to travel to the World War II memorial in Washington DC. This is great as many WWII veternan never got to see it including my grandfather Frank Zelasko. When he returned, he gave to me an American flag pin he received during his visit. I wear it frequently on my suit jacket at work as a defense contractor. May he rest in peace with the rest of his sisters, brother and parents.

“ I was always so proud to have Uncle George as my uncle. He was a US Marine Veteran of WWII, a world traveler, he was knowledgeable on any topic and a great singer. While visiting him before he died, he told me stories of his enlistment with 12 friends and how four Marines didn't make it home. I saw a tear run down his cheek as he told me he still prays for them each night. He traveled the world and before he died he reminisced about all the interesting places he saw. As I teenager, I remember dinners with Grandma and Uncle George and his discussions of current events and history lessons. I thought he would have made a great teacher. When I was a little girl, I remember hearing Uncle George singing. Although he didn't know that I was listening, I thought he sounded just like Frank Sinatra. Too many memories to mention here but they will always be in my heart. This blue candle is shining in memory of "Ole Blue Eyes".

Uncle George, I'll continue the prayers for the Marines who didn't make it home and please give our love to all our family who are in heaven with you especially your big sis, Tillie. xo

“ Uncle George was always very kind and generous. My favorite memory of him was after my son Blake was born. After I sent out birth announcements, I immediately got a card from him thanking me for sending him a picture of my son. Getting this card from him felt so good, because it was the first time since Blake had been born (about 6 weeks old) that I felt I actually did something right. Since then, every card or birth announcement I've sent to him, I've always gotten a card back from him thanking me for sending him a picture of my "beautiful family." I feel so lucky to have known him.
